

While in Congress, David Valadao made millions from his business -- but Valadao was repeatedly sued for fraud and failing to pay over ten million in debts. Valadao's business failed to pay taxes and filed for bankruptcy -- sticking taxpayers, workers, and small businesses with a thirteen million dollar bill. Worse, after a worker's arm was cut off at Valadao's business -- due to a dangerous piece of Valadao's machinery -- the state investigated and fined Valadao's business for failing to protect workers and a jury ruled Valadao's business was to blame.

November 2017: Valadao’s Triple V Dairy Allegedly Failed To Pay Two Loans From Rabobank Valued At $8.3 Million. “A dairy owned by Hanford Rep. David Valadao and his family appears headed for the auction block, as creditors have taken control of the day-to-day operations and have begun selling off cattle and equipment to pay back more than $8 million in unpaid loans. In November, Rabobank sued Triple V Dairy in Fresno County Superior Court, alleging two loans totaling about $8.3 million had gone unpaid. The lawsuit names Triple V, located east of Corcoran; the Republican congressman; five of his family members; two other businesses, Lone Star Dairy and Two Star Dairy; and 50 unnamed defendants. Court documents dated March 28 show that both sides agreed that Rabobank would take control of Triple V Dairy until its sale can be negotiated. Rabobank appointed John Van Curen, president of Old West Ranch Company in Fresno, as its agent to handle the day-to-day affairs at Triple V.” Fresno Bee, [6/11/18]

If the bankruptcy court discharges your debts in bankruptcy, it means that you will be no longer be held personally liable for these debts. Most consumer debt, including medical bills and credit card bills, is dischargeable. Certain debts, however, are non-dischargeable, meaning they cannot be wiped out through bankruptcy. These are debts that Congress has decided should not be able to be discharged for public policy reasons.” Justia, accessed [6/15/20]

CalOSHA Fined Valadao Dairy $6,450 For Safety Violations Relating To The Incident. “The California Division of Occupational Safety and Health (CalOSHA) cited and fined Valadao Dairy for safety violations. One was that ‘the employer did not provide training and instruction for the employee who was injured operating the waste separator at the dairy.’ The second, more serious violation was for failing to have guardrails around the elevated platform where Ocampo was standing as he scraped manure solids that had clogged a screen near the auger. CalOSHA initially proposed to fine the dairy $13,275 for the violations; the penalty was later negotiated down to $6,450, which was paid in May 2017.” Fresno Bee, [2/11/20]

Valadao Dairy Was Found To Be Responsible For 80 Percent Of The Accident That Resulted In An Employee Losing His Right Arm Below The Elbow. “Former Rep. David Valadao’s family dairy is asking a California appeals court to reconsider part of a recent jury verdict that held the farm mostly responsible for a 2016 accident that severed an employee’s hand. His dairy’s worker’s compensation insurance carrier had been trying to limit its potential financial losses from an incident in which employee Carlos Martinez Ocampo's arm was caught in an auger and cut off below the right elbow. A Kings County jury in October found that Valadao Dairy bore the greatest share of responsibility for the incident, assigning 80 percent of fault to the dairy, while the manufacturer of the equipment, Tulare-based U.S. Farm Systems, was deemed 20 percent responsible."
